Euroclassica

Over two million children and young people study Classics at school in Europe today. Each country has its own traditions for learning about the ancient world, but what can Classics teachers in schools learn from each other?

Each country has a professional association for teachers to communicate with each other and to update their skills. Euroclassica provides a unique platform for these national associations to come together and see what is happening in the world of Classics teaching in other European countries.

We can see that current issues not only affect our own schools but others as well. We can help each other by exchanging experiences and resources to promote Classics in our own schools.

Classics

The study of ancient Mediterranean languages and cultures. It includes not only Latin and Greek languages, but also the study of the history, art, philosophy, mythology and literature of the ancient world using texts in translation.

Euroclassica Constitution, Article 4

Euroclassica, whose aims are pedagogical, cultural and scientific, has the following aims and objectives:

- a) to bring together all the associations of teachers of classical languages and civilisations in Europe and to promote their cooperation;
- b) to ensure the promotion and defence of the study of classical languages and civilisations, providing a unifying link and a powerful platform for cultural cohesion among European countries, especially through representation at international organisations;
- c) to assert publicly the contemporary relevance of classical languages and civilisations, and to highlight the pressing need to teach them, fully respecting the autonomy of each country;
- d) to encourage cooperation with associations outside Europe which have similar aims.

Euroclassica is independent and self-supporting with members from many major European countries from Sweden to Malta, from Portugal to Cyprus. We ask each member association to pay a small annual subscription fee to support our initiatives and activities.

We meet at an annual conference at the end of August each year, in a different European country. Recent conferences took place in Athens (GR), Leyden (NL), London (UK) and Antwerp (BE).

For more information please contact the Euroclassica representative of your national association, and also see our website www.euroclassica.eu or follow us on Twitter @Euroclassica.

Euroclassica Publications

Europatria – foundational Latin texts for European countries

Europatrida – foundational Greek texts for European countries

European Symbols. A European Schoolbook – texts illustrating the continuance of Classics in European countries

European Certificates: ELEX and EGEX

Euroclassica offers its own certificates to learners of Latin and Greek who take the European Latin or Greek examination: ELEX or EGEX. This is set every year for entry-level (Vestibulum) and intermediate level (lanua). There is no fee for this certificate.

Euroclassica Summerschools

Euroclassica runs several Summer Schools: Academia Homerica in Greece, Academia Ragusina in Croatia, Academia Saguntina in Spain, summer courses of Malta Classics Association, and others. For topical information see our webpage www.euroclassica.eu.
